

UCLA

California Policy Options

Title

Author's Biographies

Permalink

<https://escholarship.org/uc/item/3dp7g6mv>

Publication Date

1998-01-01

Rosina Becerra is a professor of social welfare and policy studies at UCLA and former director of the Center for Child and Family Policy Studies. She is principal investigator for a five-year evaluation of the California Work Pays Demonstration Project, which was designed to move people off welfare.

Jeffrey Brown is a second year Master's student in UCLA's Department of Urban Planning. His principal research interests include the fields of transportation finance and transportation economics.

Peter Goldschmidt is a research statistician at California State University Long Beach. He received his undergraduate degree from U.C. San Diego and his Ph.D. from the UCLA Graduate School of Education. Currently he is conducting research on bilingual education at the Center for Language Minority Education and Research, California State University Long Beach.

Sanford Jacoby is a professor of history, management, and policy studies at UCLA whose research focuses on employment and labor policy, social welfare policy and the political economy of business-government relations. His latest book is Modern Manors: Welfare Capitalism Since the New Deal (Princeton).

Xandra Kayden city charter. is an adjunct professor of policy studies at UCLA. A political scientist with a Ph.D. from Harvard, she is currently president of the League of Women Voters of Los Angeles and is active in ongoing efforts to reform the Larry J. Kimbell is co-director of the UCLA Anderson Forecast and co-author of its quarterly National and California Forecast. He is a professor at the John E. Anderson Graduate School of Management and the Department of Policy Studies, School of Public Policy and Social Research, UCLA. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Texas at Austin.

Mark A.R. Kleiman is a professor of policy studies at UCLA. A consultant to the Office of National Drug Control Policy, he is author of Against Excess: Drug Policy for Results (Basic) and editor of the Federation of American Scientists' Drug Policy Analysis Bulletin.

Archie Kleingartner is founding dean of the UCLA School of Public Policy and Social Research and a professor of policy studies and management. He has organized several international conferences on the management and development of high technology and multimedia industries.

Daniel J.B. Mitchell is co-director of the UCLA Anderson Forecast at UCLA. He is a professor of management and policy studies. Mitchell received his Ph.D. at M.I.T.

Mary Richardson is a doctoral student in urban planning at UCLA's School of Public Policy and Social Research and a research assistant at the UCLA Anderson Forecast. Her doctoral research concerns the impact of employer-provided job training on the earnings of less-educated men.

Donald Shoup, is a professor of urban planning at UCLA with a background in both economics and engineering. His research on cashing out employer-paid parking has influenced state and federal legislation. He is a member of the American Institute of Certified Planners.

Goetz Wolff is a lecturer in urban planning at UCLA. Former chief economist for the Los Angeles Economic Roundtable, he has served as an economic development consultant for numerous local government and corporate clients.